PEATC Partners with Juvenile Justice to Improve Youth Outcomes
by Felicia Kessel-Crawley

PEATC is hearing from more and more parents concerned about the futures of their middle and high school aged children who have been repeatedly suspended, expelled or involved in the juvenile justice system. Current research reveals that up to 90 percent of children and youth involved with the juvenile justice system are identified with disabilities. In addition, school failure is recognized as one of the highest risk factors for youth involvement with the juvenile justice system. Sadly, youth experiencing failure in school are also most at risk of presenting behavioral issues that commonly lead to involvement with the court system. These behaviors include: impulsiveness, poor social skills, poor decision making skills and aggressiveness.

These alarming statistics, coupled with calls from parents concerned about the treatment of their children in correctional and detention centers and discussion PEATC has had with local, state and national experts working in the field of juvenile justice have led us to begin dialogue with other public and private agencies about how parents and professionals can build effective, collaborative partnerships to improve outcomes for children and youth with disabilities involved with the juvenile justice system. It is this growing concern that has inspired the expansion of PEATC’s Juvenile Justice Initiative to include an annual Juvenile Justice Summit. The first Summit, held on October 16, 2001, brought together more than 125 parents and professionals from public and private schools, universities, social services agencies, state and local

IDEA Law To Change Special Education

Special Education is about to change as the Congress is moving quickly to reauthorize the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). Advocates, teachers, administrators and others are concerned and hopeful about different proposed changes. Right now is the time to let your representatives know how you feel about the proposals. The House passed HR 1350 in April. The Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee sent their bill S. 1248 to the Senate in June. Both bills include major changes to special education, including changes to the way parents and schools will settle disagreements. Why should you care?

Changes to IEPs – The House and Senate bills would eliminate short-term objectives or benchmarks. The House would give the option of writing 3 year IEPs, while the Senate would offer that option after age 18. The Senate bill includes quarterly reports on progress on the IEP. The House requires that special education services be based on research. Some parents are concerned that without short-term objectives, there will be no way of tracking progress because a three year window for IEPs is too long to wait to see if special education services are effectively helping the student to progress. Others argue that these changes will reduce paperwork related to special education.

Learning Disability – The House and Senate propose revising the eligibility for LD from one that uses IQ tests to one that makes eligible students who fail to respond to research-based interventions. Funds would also be available for services to prevent students from having to come into special education through educational intervention in the regular classroom. As a result, some students who are struggling and could use specialized instruction and services available through special education will be eligible to receive services. However, some are worried that there will no longer be clear thresholds for what is and isn’t a learning disability and that special education funding will go to provide services for students without disabilities.

Behavior – Advocates are concerned that changes lead to more students being pushed out for behavior related to their disability without protections and supports in place to support positive behavior.

Resolving Disagreements – Both bills add early dispute resolution processes that include meetings for parents and schools within 15 days to resolve complaints by parents. The House also adds voluntary binding arbitration. Both limit the time a parent has to initiate due process.

Accountability – The proposed law specifies results-based measures of performance including how students with disabilities are doing compared to their peers and how states are improving their performance. Additional “companion” bills include school choice (vouchers) for students in special education, full funding for IDEA, paperwork reduction and tightened discipline procedures. Once the Senate passes its version, both bills go to a Conference.

For the Love of Reading

PEATC Literacy Initiatives
by Felicia Kessel-Crawley

In order to ensure success in life for children with disabilities, PEATC believes all children must learn how to read and improve their literacy skills. Toward that end, PEATC has partnered with various academic, business and technology partners interested in expanding opportunities for literacy training using state-of-the-art technology and research-based training strategies.

PEATC is also developing ways to offer support for parents that enables them to teach reading skills through incorporating strategies and straightforward ‘how-to’ information.

Verizon Joins PEATC Literacy Partners

PEATC is proud to announce we have recently been awarded funding support for our LiteracyAccess Online training program through Verizon Foundation’s “Verizon Reads” initiative. LAO -- LiteracyAccess Online -- is an Internet-based, hands-on, interactive instructional tool designed to help children with reading difficulties improve and enjoy learning how to read. LAO is a training tool specifically designed to provide parents, teachers, volunteers, teaching assistants and others with the literacy training skills needed to work with these children to improve their abilities (grades 4 through 8 currently.)

With fun-filled stories, bright colors and exciting characters, LAO guides parents, teachers, volunteers and paraprofessionals through creative strategies, training and student-involved exercises necessary to reach and teach students who need and want to learn to read, but who have often experienced frustration and failure at trailing behind their peers. The success of this initiative includes expanding outreach, accessibility and public awareness.

Parent Involvement

As schools and policymakers struggle to develop new ways to regulate improvement for students, the role of the parent seems to continue to lose ground despite research-based findings that underscore their critical role in ensuring improved outcomes. Consider the following 12 key findings from CADRE, the Consortium for Appropriated Dispute Resolution in Special Education, in its report entitled, “The Impact of Parent/Family Involvement on Student Outcomes: An Annotated Bibliography of Research from the Past Decade.”

1. Parent/family involvement has a significant positive impact on student outcomes throughout the elementary, middle school, and secondary years.
2. While in general parent/family involvement improves student outcomes, variations have been found according to students’ family cultures, ethnicity, and/or socioeconomic backgrounds.
3. Parent/family involvement at home has a more significant impact on children than parent/family involvement in school activities.
4. The nature of parent/family involvement that is most beneficial to children changes as they reach adolescence.
5. Parent/family involvement in early childhood programs helps children succeed in their transition to kindergarten and elementary school.
6. Parent/family assistance with homework can be beneficial; however, parents may need guidance and assistance in order to work effectively with their children.
7. The ways in which culturally diverse families are involved in their children’s education may be different from those of other families. These family practices are nonetheless valuable and should be respected and capitalized on when planning parent/family involvement programs.
8. Promising outcomes have been documented in both mathematics and literacy when children’s parent/families are involved in the educational process.
9. The most promising opportunity for student achievement occurs when families, schools, and community organizations work together.
10. To be effective, school programs must be individualized to fit the needs of students, parents, and community.
11. Effective programs assist parents in learning how to create a home environment that fosters learning and how to provide support and encouragement for their children’s success.
12. Teachers must be trained to promote effective parent/family involvement in children’s education.

Children & Mental Health

During this past General Assembly Session, Senator Houck introduced SJR 358, which gives the Commission on Youth the authority to maintain and update the Collection of Evidence-based Treatments for Children and Adolescents with Mental Health Treatment Needs (SJR 99, 2002). This resolution passed unanimously in both the House and the Senate. Here is a link to the resolution:

http://leg1.state.va.us/cgi-bin/legp504.exe?ses=031&typ=bil&val=sj358

As specified in SJR 358, the Virginia Commission on Youth, with assistance from various state agencies, has made the Collection available through the Internet and established a dissemination plan. Created with feedback from experts across the Commonwealth, this collection includes chapters on school-based services, juvenile offenders and maladaptive disorders and other features such as a glossary, definitions and licensing requirements of providers and resources on each disorder or maladaptive behaviors are included.

This collection is tailored to consumers, family members, advocates, health care providers and mental health policy makers and will be updated regularly. This print resource is now available on the Commission’s web site at coy.state.va.us. To access this document, click on “Children’s Mental Health Treatments” link.

New DOD Site

The Department of Defense has launched a new website www.EFMconnections.org for military families with special needs. The site has been designed to give these families access to information on a variety of military, federal and local programs available to families. The site provides a mechanism for families to exchange information.
Yvonne Byrd -- Tireless Advocate for Children
by Bellen Joyner

On March 26, 2003 PEATC Executive Director, Cherie Takemoto and Yvonne Byrd, wife, parent and entrepreneur were the featured guests during Headstart’s telephone conference entitled “Supporting Families in Their Role as Advocates for Their Children.” The targeted audience included representatives from Headstart’s Virginia Region III programs which includes the Springfield area where PEATC headquarters is located. Kymberly Pool, Technical Assistance Specialist for the project, moderated the teleconference.

Friends and neighbors for nearly 10 years, Yvonne and I share a lot in common. In addition to our passion for helping others, we are both mothers of 13-year-old sons in the seventh grade, at the same junior high school in Alexandria City. Her two other sons are aged nine and eleven. During the teleconference, I learned what makes her a true “champion for children with disabilities.”

While at Headstart, her youngest son’s teachers noticed some delay in his speech and language and sent him to speech therapy. He advanced to elementary school, with no follow-up instruction and was placed in a regular Kindergarten class with no special accommodations. The next couple of years were unremarkable and Yvonne thought his condition had corrected itself, however, problems resurfaced which required him to repeat the second grade because of deficiencies in reading and writing.

After years of of taking a “wait and see” approach, Yvonne finally asked the schools to evaluate her son so he could receive special education services. She urged call-participants to be proactive and open with teachers so that children don’t lose valuable time floundering in school without needed support.

PEOPLE AGAINST POLICE BRUTALITY
Following the 1995 fatal shooting of an Alexandria City resident, Yvonne founded People Against Police Brutality, a group of concerned citizens, who helped to stem the mounting anger over how this situation was being handled by the City. Residents were able to give voice to their emotions and the city was provided a forum to make its position known.

Since 1996, Yvonne has been an active member of the Alexandria City Tenants and Workers Support Committee. This group plays an essential role in promoting positive relations amongst the, African-American, Latino and general city populations concerning education, employment opportunities and housing issues.

Yvonne also holds a graduation certificate and seat on the board of directors of Computer CORE, a non-profit organization that provides certificates and employment opportunities to low income families who successfully complete a six-month computer training course.

BOOKS & BOYS CLUB
Despite the time she devotes to being actively involved with in her sons’ educational needs, community activities, the PTA and Headstart, Yvonne recently found time to spearhead a group called the “Books & Boys Club.” Her mission is to help young men (her own, as well as mine) improve their reading and comprehension skills while making them aware of the value of community service. She also exposed them to great social, cultural and artistic events and opportunities. Whew! Where does she find the energy?

Yvonne has been able to cultivate her skills as a parent and community leader through her positive exposure to effective strategies for parents and professionals. Her parting comment on the telephone conference says it all, “If I don’t as a parent then who will?” Now that’s the Yvonne Byrd I know and admire!

How to Assure a Life of Quality for your Child with Disabilities -- Without You

by Joanne Marcus

Imagine for a few moments that you are suddenly no longer in the picture of your child’s life. If you are like most parents, you really can’t imagine. Thinking about who will fill your shoes tomorrow can be quite a frightening thought today!

With advances in modern medicine, adult children with disabilities are outliving their parents. Most parents are so overwhelmed with the present day-to-day demands that planning for the future gets put on the back burner. As a result, your child’s life could be severely impacted if something were to happen to you as the primary caregiver.

While parents may oversee or be the key person responsible for providing required daily support, as well as planning for future security and quality of life, rarely do they make formal plans for the future. Often parents assume they can count on their other children who may have their own families with their own personal and financial concerns. They may be unable to undertake the additional care involves. They also may not be knowledgeable about negotiating critical systems of support, the rules and reporting requirements of government entitlement programs like Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Medicaid, or how to ensure academic compliance in school.

FUTURE PLANNING – INVESTING IN QUALITY

When a parent crisis occurs, formal future planning is the key to securing essential services and financial resources. Individuals with disabilities often require government-funded income, services and health insurance programs for their support. Although government income benefits may be small, health benefits and support services can be enormous. These benefits can include home, hospital, and long-term care, as well as, individual and family support services, like vocational and day and personal care attendants. In addition, Government programs, such as SSI and Medicaid, are means tested and the maximum amount allowed to qualify is $2,000 in income and assets. Anyone with more will be disqualified from critically needed benefits.

SETTING UP A SPECIAL NEEDS TRUST

The good news is that there is a unique way to assure that a loved one can have an enriched quality of life, above what entitlement programs can provide. By creating a Special Needs Trust (SNT) as part of an estate plan and by writing a will, you can have peace of mind for your loved ones. There is no minimum or maximum amount required to get started, but this kind of planning is still complex for most families. It can get even more complicated for families who must be concerned with the care, comfort and well-being of a son or daughter with a disability.

Step One: The first step is finding an attorney (typically an Estate Planning Attorney) familiar with helping families set-up Special Needs Trusts.

Step Two: Identify an administrator of the SNT. This can be a difficult decision. The person who administers the trust is different from being a Guardian. The Trustee manages and invests the funds for the trust and makes disbursements that are for the sole benefit of the beneficiary. The Trustee also makes reports to government agencies for those receiving SSI and Medicaid and is careful not to jeopardize government benefits. Again, this is a major responsibility.

Step Three: Contact a SNT administrator. This is an organization responsible for ensuring your wishes are carried out regarding your child. They will work together with your chosen administrator as an expert guide to give you the peace of mind of knowing your child’s special needs will be taken care of in your absence.

Now, truly is the best time to begin the process of planning ahead for your child’s future without you.

Joanne Marcus is Executive Director for the Commonwealth Community Trust (CCT), a statewide 501 (C) 3 nonprofit organization that administers trusts for individuals with disabilities that will not jeopardize government benefits. CCT is economical and is current on government rules and reporting requirements. There is no minimum or maximum amount required to fund the trust. The Board of Directors is comprised of parents of children with disabilities, who are sensitive to the needs of people with disabilities. The Trust Company of Virginia, a licensed and bonded investment corporation, acts as Trustee and invests the funds. The process for requesting a disbursement is efficient and responsive. CCT will continue in perpetuity and provides the family member(s) who are setting up the trust the opportunity to provide information regarding their goals for the trust.

Juvenile Justice Summit II

On March 7 of this year, PEATC partnered with other disability advocacy organizations, juvenile justice professionals, the public defenders office and other concerned parents and educators to hold its second annual Juvenile Justice Summit at the University of Richmond. With the theme: “Education vs. Incarceration: Taking Action to Help Our Children Learn,” attendees developed action plans for future impact after participating in discussions about relevant topics like: the American Bar Association’s Assessment of Juvenile Defender Services in Virginia; Minority Overrepresentation in the Juvenile Justice System; Improving School Retention vs. Push-out Strategies; Effective Legal Representation for Students with Disabilities; the Juvenile Death Penalty and a Special Initiative to Improve Educational Outcomes for Children in the Foster Care and Juvenile Justice Systems. Congressman Robert C. “Bobby” Scott gave a powerful keynote luncheon address on “The Impact of Injustice on Minorities and Youth with Disabilities.”

Juvenile Justice Summit III, to be held in the Spring of 2004, will focus on exploring effective educational strategies for improving student retention, reducing suspension and expulsion, expanding transition services and increasing assessment and disability training for juvenile justice professionals in corrections, probation, social services and law enforcement.

PEATC is also developing training and workshops for parents and professionals, including teachers, correctional personnel, school resource officers and law enforcement officers that focus on understanding how the Juvenile Justice System works and how the system professionals can better understand how to work effectively with children with disabilities. For further information on our Juvenile Justice Initiatives, please call Pierre Ames at 804-819-1999 or Bellen Joyner at 703-923-0010.

Cherie’s Corner (Cont’d. from P. 2)

Committee made up of representatives of both the House and Senate. After this committee agrees on a combined bill, it goes back to both houses for enactment.

Ultimately it will be members of the Congress who determine what is in the next IDEA. While there are some exceptionally well informed Congressmen and Senators, many others are not aware of how important IDEA is for students with disabilities and the parents, teachers, and others who care about them. It doesn’t matter if you agree with me, the American Association of School Administrators, disability advocates, or the Council for Exceptional Children. There are decisionmakers who need to hear from you so that they can make their best decisions that will affect the future of special education. To find out more about action in the House and Senate on IDEA, visit some sites of these organizations so that you can be well-informed and weigh in on this important legislation.

New Standards to Qualify for a High School Diploma

by Daaiyah Rashid

“Since so many of you have questions about verified credits and modified diplomas, we’ve dedicated FAQ pages toward clarifying the issues. If you are a student or the parent of a student who is transitioning from high school, looking to receive a standard diploma, who did well in the class, but is having difficulty passing the Standards of Learning (SOL) tests, there may be additional help available for you. Recently, the state department of education released new “GUIDELINES FOR LOCAL SCHOOL BOARDS TO AWARD VERIFIED CREDITS FOR THE STANDARD DIPLOMA TO TRANSITION STUDENTS.” Although we still have questions, here’s what we learned.”

Background Information
Under the Standards of Accreditation, students in the Classes of 2004-06 must earn two verified credits in English (reading and writing) and four verified credits in subjects of the student’s own selection in order to earn the Standard Diploma. Up to now, students had to pass the SOL test for a course in order to earn a verified credit. The new guidelines offer alternative means for obtaining verified credits.

School boards have more choices about how they can award verified credits in science and history/social sciences to fulfill the requirement of four (4) verified credits of the student’s own selection. Students can only earn verified credits in English or math by passing the high school SOL tests (or approved substitute tests) in reading, writing and mathematics. A list of the substitute tests approved by the Board is found in Attachment A.

General Eligibility
To be eligible to earn locally awarded verified credits in science or history/social science under these guidelines, a student must:

• Pass the high school course, but fail the related SOL after remediation and retake with a score of 375 or above or fail an approved substitute test, and
• Meet the additional achievement criteria specified below

• Have earned fewer than four of the students-selected verified credits required for the Standard Diploma.

Additional Criteria and Guidelines by Subject Area

Science and History/Social Science

The student:

• scores within a 375-399 scale score range on any administration of the Standards of Learning test after taking the test at least twice; AND,

• demonstrates achievement in the academic content through an appeal process administered at the local level.

The appeal process will include:

• The appointment by the local school board of a local review panel comprised of at least three educators. Different panels may be appointed for individual schools or groups of schools at the local school board’s discretion.

• The local review panel will review information that provides evidence of the student’s achievement of adequate knowledge of the Standards of Learning content. The panel shall have discretion in determining the information to be considered and may (Cont’d. on P. 11)
Frequently Asked Questions
(Cont’d. from P. 10)

include, but not be limited to, results of classroom assessments, division wide exams, course grades and additional academic assignments (e.g., papers, projects, essay or written questions) as deemed appropriate.

• Based on the evidence reviewed, the local review panel may (a) award the verified credit, (b) deny the verified credit, (c) suggest participation in a remedial program and retesting, or (d) make additional academic assignments as deemed appropriate to determining whether to award the verified credit.

General Provisions for Implementing New Guidelines

• No more than four verified credits may be awarded through this process and these guidelines may not be used to award verified credits for the Advanced Diploma.

• The award of verified credits under these guidelines will not be used to recalculate a school’s accreditation rating.

• Local school boards shall adopt policies that specify local procedures for implementing these guidelines.

Expedited Re-Takes

According to the 2000 Standards of Accreditation 8 VAC 20-131-110, the Board will provide opportunities for students who meet criteria adopted by the Board to have an expedited re-take of an end-of-course SOL test to earn verified credit.

To be eligible for an expedited re-take the student must:

• Need the test for verified credit, and
• Have passed the course associated with the test, and
• One of the following:
  • Failed the test by a scale score of 375-399,  OR
  • Had extenuating circumstances that would warrant retesting,  OR
  • Did not sit for the regularly scheduled test for legitimate reasons.

Students who fulfill these conditions are not required to retest, but should be given the option. Divisions should

Students who retake a test under the expedited re-take provision will receive two score reports for that test—one for the original administration of the test and one for the re-take administration. Both scores will count in the school’s pass rate for that test, however, the score from the expedited re-take administration will count in the school accreditation rating only if the student passes.

There is no retest available for the end-of-course Writing test. Re-take requests can be made after each regular

Ana Avanzini
PEATC Especialista de Información y Colaboración Latina

Queridos Padres:

Por vez primera este espacio en la revista del PEATC Press estará dedicado a responder a las preocupaciones e interrogantes de familias latinas con niños con discapacidades y yo, Ana Avanzini estaré encantada de tener la oportunidad de responder a estos de la mejor manera.

 Padres latinos han estado preguntando a PEATC por mucho tiempo, el incrementar las oportunidades para compartir e intercambiar información en español. Como madre latina con niños con discapacidades, yo estoy encantada de invitarlos a compartir con nosotros sus preguntas y preocupaciones en español, así como los difíciles obstáculos que enfrentan tratando de entender cómo conseguir recursos de educación especial para sus niños.

LA BARRERA DEL LENGUAJE

Cuando padres latinos acuden a mí, ellos vienen preocupados, atemorizados, cansados, frustrados y frecuentemente sin esperanza, sintiéndose que nadie puede ayudar a su niño(a) con necesidades especiales. Mi rol es siempre escuchar a los padres durante éstos momentos difíciles y luego ayudarlos a encontrar soluciones juntos. Como un padre latino con hijos con discapacidades, Yo sé cuán confortable puede ser hablar en nuestro propio idioma, que para mí es el español. PEATC puede ahora ofrecer este confort y apoyo a los padres latinos, para que expresen sus sentimientos y preocupaciones en su propio idioma y para que puedan recibir respuestas positivas así como alentadoras. Para mí es realmente muy inspirador cada vez que veo emergir una sonrisa de los labios de estos padres y sus ojos muestran una nueva esperanza y ellos empiezan a sentirse fuertes otra vez.

Así cuando Uds. estén sintiendo que: “la maestra nunca los escucha, la escuela no toma en cuenta las necesidades especiales de mi niño(a), o las escuelas hicieron sus decisiones en las reuniones de IEP sin darnos la oportunidad para expresar nuestras preocupaciones, por favor recuerde que PEATC está aquí para escucharlo y ayudarlo a hacer la diferencia en la vida de su niño(a) fortaleciéndolos a Uds. con destrezas para construir relaciones más exitosas con las escuelas y los profesionales quienes sirven a su niño(a).

“PREGUNTE a Ana”

Ahora, Uds. pueden “Preguntar a Ana” alguna cosa que les preocupa, escribiéndome o enviándome un correo electrónico a AskAna@peatc.org.

Compartiendo sus preocupaciones a través del periódico (anónimamente, por supuesto) nosotros podemos hacer que las voces de los padres latinos sean escuchadas, las necesidades de sus niños evaluadas y fortalecerlos a Uds. como padres para que empiencen a ser miembros importantes y activos de las reuniones de IEP con sus derechos respetados, sus preocupaciones escuchadas y sus decisiones y votos tomados en consideración real.

PEATC ofrece a todos los padres, entrenamineto y talleres en inglés y español, sobre qué conocimientos son necesarios para entender el proceso de la educación especial y participar activamente en las reuniones donde decisiones sobre el futuro de su niño(a) son hechos. También sé que para algunos de nosotros, (padres latinos) “la participación en la educación de nuestro niño(a)” es un concepto nuevo porque venimos de una cultura donde nosotros, (los padres) delegamos la responsabilidad de la educación de nuestros niños a los maestros. En América, las cosas son completamente diferentes donde se espera que los padres participen activamente en la educación de su niño(a). Ésta activa participación demanda preparación y conocimiento de parte de los padres y ésto es precisamente lo que PEATC ha ofrecido a los padres por más de 25 años!

Por favor escribame o envíe su correo electrónico a AskAna@peatc.org, o visite la página del web en www.peatc.org y presione el teclado en Bienvenidos para mayor información sobre programas, y materiales de servicios de educación especial de PEATC- todo en español. Hasta pronto!

Sinceramente
Ana Avanzini
Dear Parents:

For the first time ever, the PEATC Press is dedicating this space to addressing the questions and concerns of Latino families of children with disabilities; and I, Ana Avanzini am delighted to have the opportunity to try and address them as best I can.

Latino parents have been asking PEATC for sometime now for increased opportunities to share and exchange information in Spanish. As a Latino parent of two children with disabilities, I am pleased to invite you to share, in Spanish, with us your questions and concerns regarding your children, and the difficult challenges you face trying to understand how to get special education resources for your children.

THE LANGUAGE BARRIER

When Latino parents call me on the Spanish line or come in to see me at PEATC, they come to me concerned, worried, tired, and frustrated, often without hope, feeling that no one can help them find solutions for their child’s special needs. My role is always to listen to the parents during these difficult moments, and then to help work at finding solutions together. As a Latino parent of children with disabilities, I know how comforting it can be to speak to someone in my own native language, which for me is Spanish. In expanding our outreach services to the Latino community, PEATC can now offer this comfort and support to Latino parents who feel better if they can express their feelings and concerns in their own language and when they can receive positive and hopeful responses, as well. It is truly inspiring to me every time I see a smile emerge from the lips of these parents as their eyes show a new sense of hope and they begin to feel strong again.

So when you’re feeling like, “The teacher never listens to us, the school doesn’t take care of my child’s special needs, or the schools made the decisions for us in the IEP meetings without giving us an opportunity to express our concerns, please remember that PEATC is here to listen and help you make a difference in your child’s life by empowering you with skills to build more successful partnerships with the schools and professionals serving your child.

“ASK Ana”

Now, you can “Ask Ana” anything you have concerns about. by writing or sending an email to me at AskAna@peatc.org. By sharing concerns through the newsletter (anonymously, of course) we can make Latino parents’ voices heard, your children’s needs evaluated and empower you as parents to become important and active members of the IEP meetings with your rights respected, your concerns listened to, and your decisions and votes taken into real consideration.

PEATC offers all parents, including Latino parents, training and workshops in English and Spanish, on what knowledge is necessary to understand the process of special education and to participate actively in meetings where decisions about your child’s future are made. I also know that for some of you Latino parents “the participation in your child’s education” is a new concept because you come from a culture where parents delegate the responsibility of educating their children to the teachers.” In America, things are quite different where parents are expected to actively participate in the education of their child. This active participation demands preparation and knowledge on the part of the parents and this is precisely what PEATC has offered to parents for 25 years!

Please write or email me at: AskAna@peatc.org or visit the PEATC website at www.peatc.org and click on Bienvenidos for lots more information about PEATC programs and services materials on special education – all in Spanish. Ciao!

Virginia Offers SOL Appeals for Classes of ’04 - ’06

by Christina A. Samuels, Washington Post Staff Writer, (reprinted from orig. July 26, 2003 article)

Rising ninth, 10th and 11th graders who narrowly fail their science and history Standards of Learning tests will have other ways to earn the credits they need to graduate.

The latest change in the Virginia SOL guidelines, approved unanimously yesterday by the state Board of Education, creates a limited appeal process for the classes of 2004, 2005 and 2006, the first three in which students will have to pass at least six end-of-course SOL tests to receive their diplomas.

The board decided that some exceptions should be created for those so-called transitional students because they received much of their schooling before the SOLs existed. “By the time the SOLs really got underway, these kids were in late elementary school,” board President Mark C. Christie said. “We’re trying to be fair.”

Since 1998, students in grades 3, 5, 8 and high school have taken the tests to see if they have met state curriculum standards in English, math, history/social studies and science. Beginning with the class of 2004, high school students must pass a certain number of tests to graduate.

A passing score is 400. Under the latest revision, transitional students who score 375 to 399 on a science or history SOL test can appeal to the school district for the credit they would have received for passing the test. Students must take the test at least twice before appealing and must pass the course. Each school district will form a panel to review students’ course work to determine if credit is deserved.

Yesterday’s change joins an SOL revision already made for the three transitional classes. Those students must earn a credit in English reading, one in writing and four in subjects of their choosing. Beginning with the class of 2007, however, students will have to earn six credits for a standard diploma or nine for an advanced diploma, and at least one of those credits must be in math.

The PEATC Press -- Summer 2003 15
To celebrate our 25th anniversary building better futures for children with disabilities, PEATC has embarked upon a yearlong campaign to raise public awareness of the need for Excellence in Education for children with disabilities. Improved teacher training and utilization of research-based practices will mean better schools and brighter possibilities for all children.

Thanks to your ongoing generosity, PEATC has developed new programs and outreach initiatives, including a state-of-the-art, online literacy training program, a collaborative Juvenile Justice Initiative to keep at-risk youth in school instead of behind bars, and bi-lingual and cultural mutuality training projects and materials.

SAY YES! And become a PEATC Partner for Excellence in Education today so even more families can realize the hopes and dreams they have for their children with disabilities. Enclosed is my tax-deductible gift of:
