WHAT IS BULLYING?

Bullying is characterized by aggression used within a relationship where the aggressor(s) has more real or perceived power than the target. Bullying can involve overt physical behavior or verbal, emotional, or social behaviors.

Cyber bullying can include offensive text messages or e-mails, rumors or embarrassing photos posted on social networking sites, or fake online profiles.

Drama: Is It Happening to You? Advice for Teens Who Are Experiencing Bullying

Drama. Bullying. Teasing. Harassment. No matter what you call it, it hurts. If you're pushed, hit, or your things are ripped off or trashed, it can hurt physically. If you're ignored by friends or cruel things are posted about you online, it can hurt emotionally. If it happens to you, you've probably asked yourself, "Why me?" You know how painful it is to be treated this way.

So seriously, what can you do? A lot!

You can take back control, but you don't have to do it on your own. Remember, bullying is never your fault and you have the right to make it stop.

Begin taking back control by talking to your parent or an adult you can trust. Then check out these three steps for handling the situation at school.

1. Know That You Are Not Alone

"When I walk into the classroom, all the girls start whispering with each other and laughing." -Jenny, 7th grade

Ever feel like this only happens to you? It doesn't. Unfortunately, bullying happens to a lot of kids. It happens in small schools, large schools, rural schools, and city schools. It can happen in preschool, high school, and every school in between. It happens in Australia, Argentina, and all around the globe.

Sometimes people say that bullying is just part of growing up or that you should just "deal with it" and it will go away. This is NOT true. Even though bullying happens to a lot of kids, that doesn't ever make it right. No one deserves to be bullied, everyone deserves respect, and everyone has a right to feel safe at school.

2. Be a Self-advocate

"Self-Advocate? Seriously, what does that even mean?" -Nick, 6th grade

Being a "self-advocate" means speaking up for yourself, telling people what you need, and taking action. Bullying can be stopped, but you need a plan. First, think about what you can do to change your situation, and then make an action plan. You can download a copy of PACER's Student Action Plan from PACER.org/Bullying. In the plan:

- Write down what is happening to you, when and where it takes place, and who is involved.
- Include what you would like to change, how things could be changed, and what would help you gain control over the situation.
- List your role in this action plan, who else should be involved, and what they could do.

Share this information with your parents and an adult you trust at school.

3. Assert Your Rights

"We are told over and over again to tell an adult. I tried that at my school and was told that's just how kids in middle school act." -Jack, 8th grade student with Aspergers

Every student has the right to feel safe at school. If one adult isn't able to help you, don't give up! It is your right to talk with another adult, such as a parent. When you do speak to a teacher, an administrator, or a person you trust at school:

- Share all of the information in your action plan.
- Ask: "What can be done so I feel safe and other kids do, too?"
- Tell adults that there are laws outlining the school's responsibility in handling bullying situations. You may have additional protections under federal law when the bullying is about:
 - Race, color, or national origin
 - Sex
 - Religion
 - Disability

State and local laws may provide additional protections on other bases, including sexual orientation.

Some adults may not know this, so clue them in and keep talking until someone understands. Visit www.Olweus.org for an interactive map leading to each state law.

No matter what you call it, bullying is painful. But you don't have to go through it alone! There are people who will help you, and it is your right to be safe.
